Each truck was occupied by 10 to 15 fully equipped soldiers with steel helmets. AA machine guns were mounted behind the driver's cab of some trucks.

b. Convoy of 12 heavy-duty caterpillar tractors towing 70 to 80-mm guns (with rubber-tires, 17 to 20-foot barrels and muzzle brake) [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] towing ammunition trailers, left the Neue Kaserne. The doors of the driver's cabs of the tractors were marked with yellow crossed gun barrels on a red-bordered black field.

Comment:

- * SU 152 self-propelled guns were seen to be mounted near an aluminium tube, about 3 $\frac{1}{2}$ feet long and 40-mm in diameter, allegedly an infrared device, in front of the turret. All armored vehicles seen in the Alte Kaserne were highly maneuverable and capable of performing sharp turns.

-  A convoy of eight trucks was observed at SCHERBEN (M 53/Y 71), going in the direction of BURG, on 3 October 1949.

Comment:

The report indicates that the troops of the BURG military post (i.e. the 136th Gds/Tank GP Regt of the Third Shock Army and Group of Occupation Forces Germany artillery units), having returned from summer maneuvers at the Bietzing Heath (tank troops) and the ALTENGRABOW range (artillery troops) in mid-September 1949, again left BURG on 24 September 1949 for maneuvers. Similar information was reported from SENDAL. The troops from the BURG military post are believed to have participated in the large-scale final maneuvers of the Third Shock Army which were held in the area east of the Elbe river, north of the BURG-ALTENGRABOW-BELZIG line Ø.
